Abstract of the Disclosure

A mechanism for processing in a processor enabled to support and execute multiple program threads includes a parameter for scheduling a program thread and an instruction disposed within the program thread and enabled to access the parameter. When the parameter equals a first value the instruction, when issued by a program thread, reschedules the program thread in accordance with one or more conditions encoded within the parameter.